Concerns about “engaging men and boys” consolidating as a sub-field in and of itself rather than as a strategy for gender justice and violence prevention.

Principles of program design and implementation. Stand-alone vs. integrated/holistic. Awareness vs. change. Nuances of tactics/entry points long-term and long-term objectives. Quality control. Unintended consequences.

Us/Them? Coordination of agendas, approaches and strategies vs parallel tracks. Individual/organizational commitment to proactively dismantle patriarchy and male privilege at all levels. Discourse vs. practice.

Competition for funds – taking away funds from women or is the pie growing? Or is the shift more toward primary prevention and away from services and response. Donor responsibility. Trends and framing of issues - “gender perspective” as equal investment in men and women.