Committed to Changing LIVES

Lessons Learned:

Reaching out SGBV Survivors
- Success of an intervention targeting survivors of SGBV, attaining and maintaining their trust is paramount.

Engaging Men and Boys
- It works very effectively to enlarge & sustain the impact of project interventions to bring attitudinal change.

Economic Empowerment to reduce SGBV
- It serves as entry points & significantly contribute to increase access to services.
Aroosa was married at the age of 16 and have two children. She was facing domestic violence since last two years and once threw out of her home at mid-night after physical torture.

She was referred to R-FPAP by her neighbor where she received counseling and was further referred for legal services.

Timely provision of information and continuous counseling by project staff built her confidence which encouraged her file case in court. She got her children back and as per court’s order her husband arranged her a separate home.
Razia is 20 years old orphan girl. She was forced to marry her illiterate cousin when she was in grade 11 and even her mother was almost agreed to the proposal due to financial burden and social pressure.

Razia was reached by a peer educator and referred her to SGBV project team. She shared that she did not want to marry and wanted to continue her studies. After repeated counseling she was encouraged enough to speak for her rights and she herself denied to the proposal. Now she is doing graduation and also volunteering as peer educator.
Alina bibi was extremely poor lady with one daughter aged 13 years. She used to work as a maid and lived in her master’s home. Her second husband wanted to seduce her young daughter. She sensed the threat and resisted but she was blackmailed by her husband who filed a family suit of restitution of conjugal rights against her wife in family court Haripur.

Alina bibi then was identified as SGBV survivors by trained referral partner of R-FPAP. She was helped to file defense in court and also solicited an application to provide them safety and shelter.

Furthermore she was provided with skill training and micro loan to start earning and live an independent life.
Beneficiaries Feedback

“My sister has passed away and my family was wondering to marry her two young girls, during this time I attended gender sensitization session by R_FPAP and I took step to stop child marriage and helped my nieces to carry on their studies. I am thankful and request R_FPAP to continue this work in our community”
Community stakeholder

There is a married girl in my neighborhood, who’s husband used to abuse and physically tortured her daily and wanted to have second marriage. I counseled the couple many times and provided them information I got from R_FPAP which helped to resolve their conflicts and saved their marriage. It makes me feel a responsible citizen.
Peer Educator

I am running a training institute and have been giving trainings to SGBV survivors as referral partner of R-FPAP. It helps me to learn how can we serve to reduce social discrimination within our own capacity. This project interventions are so effective that we love to present our services for this noble cause.”

Conclusion:

Implementation of the strategy suggests that the pilot model has been effective in identifying invisible cases of SGBV as well as enhanced self-confidence and status of the survivors which has improved their access to services. It also promises sustainability of its impact through sensitized community stakeholders and capacitated service providers who will continue their job for the good of their people and themselves.
