The role of economic and decision-making power on the experience of domestic violence among married women in Nigeria

Oluwapelumi Adeyera 1;
1Osun State University, Osogbo, Nigeria.

Olayide Olabumuyi 2
2University of Ibadan, Ibadan, Nigeria.

At least one form of domestic violence was experienced by 40.6% of married women.

Only 69.6% of the married women are working.

Only 42.6% of married women had capacity to make decisions in the family.

Being educated reduces domestic violence.

Women who have low capacity to make decisions are 1.2X more likely to experience D.V.

Women who are not employed are 1.6X more likely to experience D.V.

Women who earn more than their husbands are 1.2 times less likely to experience D.V.